THE POSITION OF PARTIES.

That party will be sure to triumph."

We think we may safely say that party is the democratic party of the United States. They stand on the platform of that national democra-cy by which the Compromise, the Union, and the Constitution must all equally be defended. Everywhere the democratic party has assumed this probably include the appointment of delegates platform as the test of political orthodoxy. Even to the National Democratic Convention, should in Vermont and Massachusetts, where the true it be thought proper to make them at the time. democracy are in a small minority, they have de- Small as the number of officers, for which the clared their adhesion to the Baltimore platform.

ion and the Constitution, are utterly unable to inscribe on their banner "The Compromise as Now that the war horse of Michigan democrait is." The only two Whig State Conventions recently held have been those of Ohio and Pennsylvania. They each nominated the same pres- eran of the party and go into the contest with idential candidate, and might have been reasonably expected to avow national sentiments. On an easy or hard-fought victory depends on the the contrary, they have each put forth an anti-slavery agitation platform. The Ohio Conven-again set traps to catch " birds of every feather" tion reiterates the Wilmot proviso resolutions and league with the Advertiser's "harlots," enof the Whigs of that State of 1848, and that of tering the contest without a profession of prin-Pennsylvania sanctions the course of Governor ciples, and appealing to the unbridled passions of the fugitive slave law.

The compromise, based as it is upon the Constitution, ought to be considered sacred. To of it. It was an adjustment-a settlement of differences by an enforcement of constitutional and Pennsylvania have been agitating ever since last September to modify and alter this Compromise. They have now selected their presidential candidate, and brought him forward on this platform. The Seward Whigs of New York are known to be in favor of the same candidate and the same platform. Thus General Scott will They will not stop to discuss the consequences have the votes of the Whigs of New York, Ohio, to their party or consider the availability of any Pennsylvania and Massachusetts in the Whig national convention. They are thus united in face to catch abolition suckers, no flag of truce be of the unanimous declaration of all the southern sent from our camp to the "den of harlots."-States that the repeal of that law will be a violation of good faith-of the Constitution-and giving just cause for dissolving the Union.

Such being the anti-Union and anti-compromise attitude of the Scott Whigs and agitators it is not without interest that we inquire, what course will the Whigs of New Jersey pursue ? perceive by the papers any decided indidation.

The Newark Mercury and the State Gazette are cratic standard.

[State Journal. evidently disposed to go for Scott, but are restrained by their prudent friends. Yet they have each endorsed and approved the anti-slavery platform of Gov. Johnston. The Fredonian and Jersey City Sentinel appear inclined to support Mr. Fillmore. The Free Soil support, which is chiefly the support of General Scott, alarms their conservative feelings. Not so with the Mercury and Gazette-they like Free Soil company. They are fully prepared for the sectional course indicated by the Lancaster nomination. It may be fortunate for them that they are held back from the egregious folly of supporting a candidate thus brought forward under the auspices of those moral traitors whose agitations have so long convulsed the country.

We perceive that the Abolition-whig papers and orators in Massachusetts are enumerating New Jersey as certain to go for Scott. We leave for Europe. The house where the young think they are reckoning without their host,-Whatever course a few intriguing politicians may desire the Whigs of New Jersey to take, we feel confident from information in our possession that General Scott will not receive their support for the nomination. However, let who will be their candidate, the division line between the two great parties of the country is so plainly draw in reference to the Union, the Constitution and the Compromise that the success of the national democracy is inevitable.

It appears according to the official documents that, the insurrection by the Spanish troops has been quelled, and that the rebels who had taken refuge in the mountains have been reduced to the last extremity.

Some thirty years ago, a young gardener, who worked for twelve shillings a week, at a garden near Chiswick, about five miles from London, offended his master, and was turned off. He was standing, unemployed, one day, at a garden gate, near the residence of the Duke of Devonshire, who happening to pass, ascertained that he was a journeyman gardener out of work, was pleased with his intelligence and manners, and asked him to call the next day, at Devonshire House, The call resulted in his being sent down to Chatsworth in Devonshire. There he soon reached, as a scientific and practical gardener, the very head of his profession, which position he had long maintained, before he was known to the world as Joseph Paxton, the de-
